HISTORICAL.

Gleanings Here, There and Everywhere, But Mostly In Oxford County

BY LEONARD B. CHAPMAN.

Two errors appear in my last article that I observe and wish to correct:—Where it states that the wife of Timothy Hastings, Jr., who was before marriage, Miss Sarah A. Stone, bore him three children; for three should appear five to be correct. I copied from the Bethel history, page 253.

The fourth child was named Timothy, after his father and grandfather. He followed the calling of both and located at Andover, this State, where he had a wife and established a successful business, and where he departed this life.

—Phineas F., a brother to the preceding, was by occupation a blacksmith, and resided at the home of his parents at North Bethel.

—William D. Hastings, whose name appears as the third child of Timothy Hastings, Jr., in the Bethel history, born April 25, 1842, was, like his father and brothers, a blacksmith who purchased or established a business located upon the south westerly corner made by Vernon joining Main street, near the Soldier's Monument, on Bethel Hill.

September 30, 1868, young Mr. William D. Hastings succeeded at North Bethel as postmaster Mr. Orange C. Frost, his uncle, though the locality was generally known at that time as "Swan's Corner." This office has had a precarious existence and reliable data can be obtained only from official record. From printed reports it appears that June 9, 1876, Arvilla Swan succeeded Mr. Hastings, and two years later the office was discontinued, but it is running, or the office again has not been removed from the Swan domicile.

The other, or second error, in my last article to which allusion has been made, appears in the location of the Timothy Hastings, Jr., work shop. The Atlas map places it southerly of the residence upon the same side of the road running up northerly, while, in fact, it was located upon the same side of the way as the residence, and at upon the easterly side as I placed it. I viewed the departing building from the distance the last time I looked upon it when the roof boards had been removed. I should have perhaps gone closer and searched on the earth for a wooden nail or a forty pound sledgehammer thrown with one hand by a fast young Hastings to a tall tree a short way and there lodged.

—George Straw Hastings, an aunt to the preceding, born April 12, 1818, was a daughter of Timothy and Rachel, became the wife of Orange C. Frost of Bethel.

The person who enters upon a genealogical search for individual members of the numerous Frost family cannot report at every time that the "track of the sky clear and the work day." Some years ago the woods of Bethel and Newry as well as other places were full of the name, all descending from Moses Frost of Newry, or the most of them. Moses was born February 15, 1710, baptized March 21, 1723, in Blackberry Parish, son of William Frost and Love—his wife. The statement is from the records but the story that all, or most of the name in Bethel and Oxford county, descend from Moses is traditional. Moses, it is claimed, was the first child of William; the second and Aaron the third, all of whom settled in Newry, and six others, in that and other places in Maine.

On page 250, Dr. Lapham in his history of Bethel, devotes a little space to the name from which it appears that Mrs. wife presented him with eleven children and that Orange Clark Frost was the sixth on the list of seven, born February 23, 1812, who was Miss Tyrone B. daughter of Timothy Hastings, Sen., as his first wife. April 7, 1837 their first child was born, but where I have yet to see May 9, 1811, their third child.

Timothy Hastings was born in Paris and the light of day. Experience teaches that in general work history is an unsafe guide. No corrections is required but in the name of all records I accept the fact that from an exact census of Bethel taken in 1850, it is ascertained that the following names were recorded on page 85:

WEDDINGS

TYLER—SHAW.

Thanksgiving evening was the time chosen for the pretty wedding at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Shaw. Next to the youngest daughter, Mildred Emma, was united in marriage with Alton Eugene Tyler.

A number of relatives and friends were gathered in the little parlor at eight o'clock. At the piano, Mrs. George Barron, a cousin of the bride, by a few bars of Lohengrin's familiar march announced the approach of the bride, who was borne on the arm of her father. The scene was unpretentious but impressive as she was led to the altar, which was beautified with a broad arch of evergreens and pink and white cut flowers. She carried a bouquet of pure white roses. Her head and face were only in part concealed by the long bridal veil, which was very becomingly draped and caught back with lilies of the valley, over a gown of white broadened silk. The marriage vows were solemnized with Rev. W. C. Curtis officiating. The Episcopal single ring service was used in a manner both pleasing and pleasing.

Then followed an informal reception and refreshments consisting of ices and assorted cake. Guests from out of town were: Mrs. O. P. Whitman and Mrs. George Barron of Lewiston, and Miss M. V. Shaw of Plymouth, N. H.

Mr. and Mrs. Tyler received as wedding gifts valuable and useful presents consisting of silver, china and linen. A few minutes after nine o'clock Mrs. Tyler again came down dressed for traveling—wholly in brown. A little later, the pair took the train, accompanied by the usual showers and other manifestations of good wishes.

BROWNE—SMITH.

Wednesday evening, Nov. 26th, the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Smith, Vernon street, Bethel, was the scene of a very pretty wedding when their daughter, Alice M., was united in marriage to Arnel R. Browne of Bethel.

The ceremony was performed in the parlor beneath an arch of beautiful evergreen and a profusion of flowers. The maid of honor was Miss Jeanette M. Harmon of Scarborough, a cousin of the bride. The groom was attended by Everett C. Smith, the bride's brother. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. E. Fickett, ex-pastor of the Methodist church, the single ring service being used.

The bride was beautifully gowned in white satin, the only ornament being a chain and pendant of pearls, a gift of the groom. The maid of honor was dressed in salmon pink satin, with rhinestone ornaments.

Dainty refreshments were served in the dining room by Mrs. Venie Browne, sister of the bride, assisted by the Misses Marion Bean and Emma Thompson.

The wedding was strictly private being attended only by relatives of the contracting parties and a few intimate friends.

The bride, one of Bethel's most popular young ladies, was a graduate of Gould's Academy in the class of 1911. Since then she has been a very successful teacher in Bethel and surrounding towns.

The groom is one of Bethel's most respected young men. Mr. and Mrs. Browne were the recipients of many beautiful gifts, showing the high esteem in which they are held by their many friends.

Among those present were: Mrs. Venie Browne, Mr. Philip Smith, Mrs. Helen Toland, Miss Emma Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Fought, Mr. Everett Smith, Miss Jeanette Harmon, Miss Marion Bean, Miss R. E. Fickett and Mr. Ash Smith.

THE HOME CIRCLE.

Pleasant Reveries—A Column
Dedicated to Tired Mothers
as they Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide.

Life is short—too short to get everything.
Choose you must, and as you choose, choose only the best—in friends, in books, in recreation, in everything.

No man or woman of the humblest sort can really be strong, gentle, pure and good without somebody being helped and comforted by the very existence of that goodness.—Phillips Brooks.

ALONG THE ROAD.

By Robert Browning Hamilton.
I walked a mile with Pleasure,
She chattered all the way.
But left me none the wiser
For all she had to say.

I walked a mile with Sorrow,
And ne'er a word said she;
But, oh, the things I learned from her When Sorrow walked with me.

MAKING THE HOME ATTRACTIVE.
Making the home attractive for the children has come to be one of the important questions of the homemaker.
Outside attractions are made more important every year, and there is the necessity for the home attractions to keep pace with them.

Of foremost importance in making an attractive home is the attitude of parent and children toward each other, and their becoming friends and companions together. Much is said of the present time becoming interested in the topics of the day, to solve and intellectual pursuits, that they have little time for homemaking.

This may be true in extreme cases, but it is noticed that usually the higher level of education, broader knowledge of social and economic problems, and larger views of the duties and possibilities of homemaking which may be gained from clubs and other outside influences, are conducive to better home conditions and closer comradeship between children and parents. Outside interests, however, or purely utilitarian matters, such as keeping the clothing in order, keeping the house, or earning the living, are not sufficient excuse to keep the fathers and mothers from becoming closely associated with their children as real friends and comrades, says the Christian Science Monitor.

One of the strongest ties with which to bind a boy to his home is a room fitted up exclusively for his use, where he can have his toys and games, books, pictures and school souvenirs, and to which he will be free to invite his chums. Freedom in the home is something which all boys do not have but which they appreciate, particularly in a room devoted to their exclusive use.
Music is always an attractive feature in the home, and, if every member of the family is taught to play some instrument, it is sure to go a long way in solving the problem of how to keep the boy at home. If he is not particularly interested in the study of music, it may be a waste of time to carry the instruction to any great extent, but it may go far enough so that he will be enabled to contribute his part to the merry evenings at home.

In one attractive home the children look forward to their weekly concert on Friday night, when no lessons are to be learned for the following day.
There are sure to be invitations sent to some of their young friends, who are given a hearty welcome by the parents. In the orchestra are two violins, a piano, mandolin and mouth organ, and the pet dog is taught to stand on his hind legs and "speak" as his part in the entertainment.

Another subject of interest to a boy is that of pets. Although some home-wives deem it a nuisance to have animals about the house, the love and care which children give to them is enabling and refining, if they are taught to be kind to them. The country home is not complete without them, but it is not always convenient to keep them in the city; yet this may be done satisfactorily in the crowded sections, as has been proven by one boy who turned an unused basement room into a small menagerie, and the dogs, rabbits, angora cat and raccoon formed a happy family. In the company of which the proud possessor spent many delightful hours every day.

Adding to these attractions any specialty which the children may particularly desire, and a spirit of love, good cheer, sympathy and appreciation of one another's efforts and an unselfishness and thoughtfulness for others' comfort and happiness, will render a home so attractive that the children will have no desire to spend their spare time outside.

THE WOMANLY WOMAN.
There is nothing more truly lovable than the woman who is genuinely womanly. There is a charm in her femininity that no acquired grace can lead.
More especially in this age is the genuinely womanly woman admired, for girls seem to have a desire to be so manly, so loud, not only in mannerisms, but in talk and dress, many choosing the sports of men in preference to the pastimes of women. The majority of men, I think, really prefer the quiet ladylike girl with a soft sweet voice, an affectionate disposition, and the girl who knows how to be a little lady, not only in her manners but talk.

Long talk and slang words are not for the ladylike girl, and although some people tolerate loose manners sometimes, they do not really admire it.
Far more to be appreciated is the girl who openly avows that she likes nice clothes and is given over to many little feminine vanities, than the one who dresses so mannishly, and who imitates the walk of her brother, though she may be able to discuss the most abstruse subjects with an air of confident knowledge that the others cannot even boast.

To be a ladylike woman does not mean that one need adopt fads and follies indiscriminately. The woman who can make her home bright and attractive, who can be the model hostess as well as wife and mother, who is well informed and able to talk intelligently, yet who is wise enough to realize that woman's privileges are preferable to woman's rights, is the girl or woman we most all admire, and the one fit to be taken to any honorable man's heart.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL

Health Is Worth Saving, and Some Rumford Falls People Know How to Save It.

Many Rumford Falls people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Weak kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health, but there is no need to suffer nor to remain in danger. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—a remedy that has helped thousands of kidney sufferers.

The following statement leaves no ground for doubt.

A. L. Holt, carpenter, Elm St., Bethel, Me., says: "I consider Doan's Kidney Pills a very reliable kidney remedy. I have used them with splendid results. I found them effective in curing backache and regulating the action of the kidneys."

The above is not an isolated case. Mr. Holt is only one of many in this vicinity who have gratefully endorsed Doan's. If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Holt had. 50c at all stores. THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Events of Interest From the Seat of Government.

By J. E. Jones.

The Currency Bill.

The situation in relation to the currency legislation appears to have clarified, and the measure being supported by the Democratic majority in the Senate, is practically the bill as passed by the House. There are a good many amendments to the original bill prepared at the instigation of President Wilson. Senator Owen from now on will jump into added prominence as the Administration leader in the Senate. While Senator Hitchcock is the Democratic champion of the opposition, he is likely to overreach the eminence he attained when he arose day after day in the House of Representatives demanding an investigation of the Interior Department under Secretary Ballinger. It was Hitchcock who drove Ballinger out of public life, and did more than any other Member of Congress to disrupt the Taft administration. In those days Mr. Hitchcock was fighting his political enemies. Now he is a thorn in the side of his party's flesh, as the leader of the Republican Members in the Committee who signed the minority report with him. Senator Newlands of Nevada and Senator Shafroth of Colorado, both Democrats, jumped into the fray at the outset, with amendments to the Democratic bill. The substance of the objection by them and other representatives of western states is because of the lack of regional reserve banks; and it is evidently the belief in the far west that they are to be slighted in the distribution of these regional banks.

Segregation of the Races.

With the advent of the Democratic Administration and the control of Congress by the southern states there were a great many charges of segregation of the races of the Departments. Immediately following the inauguration of President Wilson there came to Washington large armies of office-seekers from the southern states, who felt that inasmuch as they had been occupying obscure corners for so long, that it was about time for them to share in some of the spoils of victory. Finding that there was not room enough for them all, there resulted an organization in Washington whose object was the segregation of the races in government positions. This demand, though rather freely expressed in having as its principal champions disappointed politicians, likely found some support in a number of Departments where prejudice existed against the negro. However, it was discovered that the civil service was rather unyielding and unyielding, and the "segregators" gave up the job. Although there still remain in Washington a good many people who continue to fight the struggle of civil war, yet the indications are that there will not be any early revival of efforts toward segregation.

Salt Against U. S. Senator.

The ways of rich Senators and their campaign managers are indeed along not rocky routes. The whole country knows the story of the election of Isaac Stephenson of Wisconsin, which brought on an investigation in the Senate itself, wherein the multi-millionaire had a clear call when it came to the final vote as to his ouster. One of the Senator's proteges in Washington has been Mr. Rodney Sackett, who until recently held a position on the Senate clerical force. Having lost out along with a good many other Republicans whose places were wanted by Democrats, Sackett has taken up the vocation of suing Senator Stephenson for "services rendered" during the campaign. Mr. Sackett was one of the men who held the Stephenson bag in the Wisconsin primaries.

The Progress of the Nation.

A series of these characteristically sensational articles declaring that the eyes of the world rest on the National Capital, and adding that the industrial interests are shivering in their boots, have made their simultaneous mysterious appearance on the front pages of newspapers throughout the country, serving to illustrate that there still remains in the vicinity of a little narrow street running from Broadway down to the East River, a coterie of people who have not yet discovered that the American people are no longer frightened by somebody hollering "ho!" The hysteria of the trusts has become familiar to Washington in the past six or seven years, during which time the control of government has been passing swiftly to the government itself, instead of being a subtle privilege of big business. It is a certain fact that all political parties in existence today recognize the need for advance legislation, and likewise all concur in the need of currency reform. There are natural differences of opinion as to the method of arriving at this, and there are those who do not agree with the Democrats that their bill is anywhere near perfect, but the three principal political parties are united in desiring to secure the best possible legislative results. The attitude of the leaders of these great political parties assures every reasonable protection to legitimate business. However, "big business" has started its backfire in the hopes of checking the investigation of trusts which has been under way in this country for a number of years. The reason for this hidden activity is evident since Congress is determined to pursue federal investigation on a more extensive scale than has been heretofore known. Hence the conflict in which the greed of trusts stands for the first time in its history unsupported by any substantial wing of any political party.

Want Their Panama Back.

The great big United States has been paying little attention to the overhanging wall of the Republic of Columbia, since that eventful day when a revolution was started on the isthmus of Panama resulting in less than twenty-four hours in an independent republic being recognized and protected by the strong arm of Uncle Sam, through the action of former President Roosevelt. The position taken by Roosevelt was that politicians, capitalists and others interested in obstructing the progress of the Canal were using Columbia as a cat's paw to draw their chestnuts out of the fire. Therefore Mr. Roosevelt felt justified in taking the short cut in establishing an independent government on the isthmus. Columbia has never ceased to press its claim against the United States, and it is therefore of interest that Secretary Bryan has been the first to lend an ear to the protesting Colombian government. It is said that Columbia definitely proposed that the United States repudiate the recognition of the independence of Panama, and permit Columbia to force that country back to its old position as a province of Columbia. In return Columbia will then give the United States a clear title to the Canal Zone, and promise that the hostilities of that country against the United States will end. Of course, Columbia will expect a big piece of United States currency as a bribe for this loss of territory, and its injured dignity.

Suggests National University.

Congressman Bartholdt in a resolution which he has presented to the House of Representatives, proposed to create a National University at Washington, D. C., to be maintained under the control and at the expense of the federal government. The Congressman evidently believes that Uncle Sam does everything better than anybody else, and since the states have their various universities and colleges, he wants a committee of Congress to find out what the government could accomplish along the same line.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S SURVEY GETS GOVERNMENT O. K.

Government surveyors, who have just been checking up some of the lines reputed to have been run by George Washington in his days of chain and compass work, have found them good. About 1751, according to tradition, George Washington, then 19 years old, ran out for Lord Thomas Fairfax the line between what was then to be Augusta and Frederick counties, Virginia, this being only a part of a great deal of surveying which he is said to have been engaged upon at that time. These two counties were separated from what was then Orange county, and the grant to Lord Fairfax was supposed to extend westward to the Pacific ocean. Subsequently these large tracts were further subdivided, so that the "Fairfax line" as it is generally known, runs now between Rockingham and Shenandoah counties, with the original Augusta and Frederick counties to the south and north respectively.

In the organic act for the formation of the two counties, or "parishes" as they were then called, it was required that the line should be a straight one from the head spring of Holzman river, one of the sources of the Rappahannock, to the head spring of the Potomac.

Since it was required that the line should be straight it was first necessary to get the approximate course by building large bonfires on the intervening high points. Then starting from the top of the Massanutten mountains, the line was run straight away over intervening mountains and rivers toward the northwest.

THE FAIRFAX STONE.

Away off across a part of what is now West Virginia there is a large rock known today as the Fairfax Stone. It is in the monument which marks the southwest corner of Garrett county, Md., the southeast corner of Preston county, W. Va., and prominent points in the boundaries in two other West Virginia counties. A line from Orange court house, coinciding with the Shenandoah and Rockingham county line, passes through this Fairfax Stone, which gives the name to a nearby station, Fairfax, on the Western Maryland railroad. It has been assumed that, in running this line, a high peak northwest of Orange court house was the starting point, and that from here it was possible to see a distant peak in the North mountain range over the top of the intervening Massanutten mountain.

Washington, of course, used a simple compass, and his line could not be expected to check absolutely with that obtained by the government surveyors. The who have retraced his survey, using high power transit and all the reflecting and accurate methods which modern instruments allow. Nevertheless, the line was run so carefully in the first place that but little variation has been found in it. Even without instruments it is possible to distinguish the course of the line with surprising distinctness. From the top of Middle Mountain in the Massanutten range, the Shenandoah, Rockingham, or Fairfax, line can be readily followed by means of the bonfire tops rising from earliest days, and by the blocks of timber, alternate to cleared away or left standing, which come up from either county and stop at the line, like squares in a checker board. Then if one turns to the south, and the same demarcations are plain across the valley of the south fork of the Shenandoah, cutting straight through the present Page county, which is made of land formerly in Shenandoah county, belonging to the Fairfax grant, and partly from land formerly in Rockingham. Thus, as far as the eye can see in either direction, this old line shows plainly.

The Washington compass, now to be seen at the U. S. national museum in the city named for its owner, is presumed to be the same one used in running this line more than 180 years ago. WASHINGTON'S SURVEY MARKS.

The Fairfax Stone stands as a permanent monument. In addition, there are, throughout that section of the

HOW THE RED CROSS SEAL ORIGINATED.

Nearly $1,500,000 has been raised by Red Cross Christmas Seals in the last five years, and yet many people do not know how this charity stamp idea originated.

Some of your grandmothers first played "post office" with stickers similar to Red Cross seals "way back in 1882, when they conceived the idea of selling stamps at fairs for the benefit of the relief funds for the soldiers' hospitals in Brooklyn, Boston and elsewhere. Nearly $1,000,000 was raised in this way before 1905. After the war, this method of raising money was discontinued in this country for a generation, although it found vogue in Portugal, Switzerland, Austria, France, Spain, Denmark, Norway, Russia, Sweden and other European countries. There are now thousands of different types of charity stamps used in all parts of the world, as many as forty being used in Austria for children's hospitals alone.

Stamps or seals were first used to get money for the anti-tuberculosis crusade in Norway and Sweden in 1904. To Jacob Riis, the well-known social worker of New York, and to Miss Emily P. Bissell, the energetic secretary of the Delaware Red Cross, jointly belong the honor of originating our American Red Cross Christmas Seal. In 1909, Mr. Riis' interest was aroused by the receipt of a Christmas tuberculosis stamp on a letter from Norway. He published an article about this queer-looking stamp in the "Outlook," and suggested some possible uses for it in this country. Miss Bissell at once saw an opportunity here and prepared a stamp from the sale of which her society realized $3,000 for tuberculosis work. So impressed was she with this success that she induced the American Red Cross to take up the sale in 1909 on a national basis. With very little organization and with hardly any attempt at careful advertising, the sale runs now between Rockingham and Shenandoah counties, with the original Augusta and Frederick counties to the south and north respectively.

country, various other records of these Washington surveys. For example, a large white oak which stands at the corner of a farm about 1 1/2 miles from Lees Ferry, Hardy county, W. Va., was, according to a persistent story of that section of the country, marked by Washington.

Survey blazes cut into trees, and since grown over, have been cut away, and a count of the annual layers of growth over the old wounds shows them to have been made at the time Washington was surveying. One strange thing about these blazes is that they are several feet higher than those put on trees by woodmen of today. This fact has given rise to a sort of superstition that Washington, known to have been very tall, was actually a giant. Other authorities have said that Washington did much of his work on horseback, and made his blazes with a long-handled ax from the saddle.

The town of Whitepost, Clarke county, Va., takes its name from a post presumed to have been set by Washington as one of his survey marks. The post, formerly exposed, is now covered by a projecting cave which shelters it from the weather, and from the old hand of the vandal tourist.

WHY THE LINE IS RETRACED.

The reason that this old Washington survey line is being retraced is because the federal government is purchasing lands in this neighborhood, in connection with the new Appalachian forests which are being acquired at the headwaters of navigable streams, under the terms of the Weeks law, designed to protect these watersheds from the evils of deforestation. The government requires a clear title before the land can be paid for. In making sure of the titles it is necessary, in many cases, to go back to original survey grants, to colonial records, and to have recourse to surveys before the facts of ownership can be indisputably established.
